The country's debt has risen to more than 100% of its GDP, the indebtedness is by far the highest in the world, and there is a risk that a large number of banks would need to be closed. In addition, concerns about the solvency of Spanish banks and the eurozone in general are significantly higher than before the debt crisis started. The exact composition of the potential state bailout for Spain and the solution to the debt crisis are the subject of intensive public debate. The market reaction to the situation has been remarkable. On the one hand, investors have sharply increased their lending to Spain because they are convinced that there is a large risk of a disorderly exit of the country from the euro in the near future, which would make Spanish banks insolvent. On the other hand, many believe that the Spanish government will again increase its debt. Spain has already ruled out the debt limit for the country of 60% of its GDP as proposed by the European Commission, and refused to accept the aid provided by the European Stability Mechanism. The latest developments show that the situation is unsustainable and that Spain's fundamental problems with its economy will not be solved in the short term.[Reproductive factor, periodontal disease and cardiovascular disease. A case-control study]. This case-control study was undertaken to determine whether cardiovascular disease is related to non-specific factors such as reproductive and menstrual events. We also evaluated the association of periodontal disease with cardiovascular disease. The study population consisted of 243 males and 256 females admitted to the Hospital of the School of Medicine of the University of Chile for cardiovascular disease from 3e33713323
