Screen Pointer

Screen pointer is the application that communicates with the web browser. It maps the mouse cursor over to the web browser and keeps sending coordinates to the web browser for showing the mouse pointer over the web browser. It allows the user to point, click, and drag the mouse pointer over a web page. It keeps logging mouse movement and sends it to the web browser, which means if you are accessing a web page from your mobile phone, you can type, click, drag, and do more by using your finger over the web browser. It can be run on all the web browsers such as Internet Explorer, Chrome, and Firefox. It works on Windows 7, 8, 10, 10.1, and the other new releases. It is available in all languages. ## Screen Pointer

The ScreenPointer Browser Helper Object (BHO) enables a user to access multiple web sites, such as Yahoo! and MSN, from a mobile phone or PDA using a web browser, and control the mobile phone or PDA to point to specific web sites that a user wishes to view from the Web sites displayed in the mobile phone or PDA. To enable a user to access multiple web sites, a ScreenPointer BHO must first register each of the desired web sites with the web sites' respective proxy server (e.g., proxy.yahoo.com) using the web sites' respective proxy server's IP address, and then update the web sites' respective proxy server with the ScreenPointer BHO's IP address. The ScreenPointer BHO then monitors and registers the IP address of the mobile phone or PDA using the ScreenPointer BHO's IP address with the proxy server of the Web sites' respective web page. Using the ScreenPointer BHO with any mobile phone or PDA also enables the mobile phone or PDA to automatically select the desired Web sites, based on the information provided by the ScreenPointer BHO, and to control the mobile phone or PDA to access any of the Web sites that the user has registered with the ScreenPointer BHO. For example, a user using the ScreenPointer BHO with his or her mobile phone or PDA can register, with his or her mobile phone or PDA, the web sites of his or her choice for accessing using the ScreenPointer BHO, and then using the ScreenPointer BHO, control his or her mobile phone or PDA to automatically select and access the web sites of his or her choice. This enables the user to access the web sites from a mobile phone or PDA without having to manually select the desired web sites and without having to manually switch among different web browsers.
